NatureMill, Inc. Announces Partnership with Costco

San Francisco, CA, November 1, 2008 – NatureMill, Inc., the manufacturer of the first and only fully-automatic indoor home composter, announces their new partnership with Costco. Leading the way in technological home innovations, the NatureMill Plus will be available for sale at the nationally recognized wholesale distribution company.

“The NatureMill Plus is a culmination of years of research and development, and we’re excited to partner with companies like Costco to bring our products to mainstream consumers,” says Russ Cohn, president and founder of NatureMill, Inc.

NatureMill, Inc. brings composting to the home user. The units simulate the composting process and are designed to be used indoors. Waste is collected right where it is generated—in the kitchen.

Here’s how it works:

- Add food waste any time, any day.
- NatureMill does the rest by mixing and heating continuously.
- A powerful carbon air filter is included to remove odor.
- Compost is ready every 2 weeks.

Best of all, NatureMill composters provide home gardeners with a source of rich, organic fertilizer. There is something uniquely satisfying about witnessing the entire food chain: from garden to table, to garden again.

The NatureMill Plus (with a 6 month supply of sawdust pellets for added value) is available at Costco. More information about NatureMill, Inc. can be found at www.naturemill.com
